Most (if not all) rules books state a 'gradual' slope towards home is what is required for a mound. Designed with the MLB rulebook in mind to match as closely as possible the 1" of drop per foot as stated in the pitching mound specifications section. Player safety is important, the mound is produced so that the leading edge of the mound is built without a 'front lip'. Considering all the variations of rules and leagues, the mounds are currently used in USSSA, Triple Crown, Pony, Babe Ruth, Little League, Super Series as well as High Schools, Colleges, Park/Rec. and countless leagues across the U.S.
